

Information on a Topic: Where to Start

Galter Library has several resources to get you started with your research, and if you still need help, feel free to contact us for answers to your specific questions.

- Ebook collections allow you to search inside multiple books simultaneously. This is especially useful if you're not sure which area you should be focusing on.
- GalterLists are lists of recommended resources, both print and electronic. Lists are created by you, librarians, and anyone who has elected to share a list. Librarian lists are a good place to start to get an overview of a topic's resources.
- Browse by subject Galter Library's electronic books and journals. This is a subset of Northwestern University's larger collection.
- Top databases at Galter Library: the library's most popular journal literature and drug information databases
- Research and systematic review support: Contact us to set up a consult with a library information expert before you embark on a major research project.

Printed: Thursday, October 19, 2017 7:21 AM

Source: <https://galter.northwestern.edu/help/information-on-a-topic-where-to-start.pdf>